FOREWORD

When Don Zillman and I undertook to write The American University in Summer (University of Wisconsin Press 1967), we were appalled at the seeming pacuity of literature on college and university summer terms, particularly the lack of quantitative research. Our problem stemmed in part from the plain fact that summer sessions were indeed under-represented in the literature of American higher education, but the problem was exacerbated by the relatively crude information retrieval systems available at the time. Our fellow summer session administrators around the country shared our quandary.

When the American Summer Sessions Senate was organized in 1973 to improve liaison among the four principal summer session associations, a leading item on the Senate agenda for cooperative action was "a bibliography of research literature on college and university summer sessions." Fortunately, in recent years there have been an increasing flow of summer term literature, vastly expanded and refined computerized searches of that literature, and a growing interest on the part of the research committees of the summer session associations.

As a University of Wisconsin-Madison contribution to the field, it has been a pleasure to help in the development of this Bibliography. It is principally the work of an accomplished librarian, Luan Gilbert, together with the advice and counsel of Nancy Abraham and Dr. Robert Belle. Some of the references are peripheral, but many of them summer session personnel will find extremely enlightening.

As college and university summer terms proceed into a future at once uncertain and challenging, their administrators can draw insight and inspiration from qualitative interpretations of the past, from investigations of current characteristics, and from speculations about future trends.

PREFACE

Over the past seven or eight years members of the various summer sessions associations, and particularly members of the respective research and/or statistics committees, have been concerned about the development of a Summer Sessions Bibliography.

From time to time one or another of the associations has prepared or updated a selected bibliography of summer sessions literature for distribution at one of the respective national meetings. When plans were developing for the First National Institute in Summer Term Administration in 1974, Robert Belle, University of Wisconsin-Madison Summer Sessions, with support from Les Coyne, Indiana University Summer Sessions, prepared an extensive updated bibliography from selected previous others, as well as engaged in searches of the literature at that time. Since then, the bibliography has been updated for the 1975 and the 1977 National Institutes respectively.

In addition, in 1976-77 and 1977-78, the North American Association of Summer Sessions Research Committee (Nancy Abraham, Chairperson, Alan Ashton, University of Massachusetts, Donald Wallace, Drake University, William Sesow, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Willard Deal, Appalachian State) worked to further update the bibliography. Les Coyne, Indiana University, and Vernon Ludeman, St. Cloud State University and Research Committee Chairman, North Central Conference on Summer Schools, were also consulted. Throughout the past six years, Robert Belle did yeoman work on what is now resulting in a consolidated, published Summer Sessions Bibliography.

With the present bibliography arrangement, the suggestions for routinely updating the bibliography, and the fact that the present citations are now on magnetic cards in the University of Wisconsin-Madison Summer Sessions Office, it is our hope that one or all of the associations will pick up on the idea of routinely updating the bibliography for the use of the profession.

The following sources have been searched in the effort to locate all literature relating to summer schools in institutions of higher education.

A computerized search was done using the Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Inc. (BRS). BRS uses the Educational Research Information Clearinghouse (ERIC) data base which contains citations and abstracts for literature that is listed in Resources in Education (formerly Research in Education) and the Current Index to Journals in Education. The lag-time between publication date of an article or research paper and its entry into the ERIC data base is about three months. In order to conduct this search, subject headings or "descriptors" were chosen from The Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors, 6th. edition (Frederick Goodman, Macmillan Information, 1975). BRS retrieves information by use of these descriptors and, in addition, can locate the citations from Thesaurus descriptors or any other items or phrases used in the text of an abstract. This search was conducted in September, 1977.

If the citation or abstract indicated that the article could be particularly important for our purposes, the original article was found and read or the microfiche of the article was read. Footnotes, references, and bibliographies of these articles were searched for citations of new material.

The following standard references were searched:

- Education Index
- Review of Education Research
- Essay and General Literature Index
- Bibliographic Index
- Public Affairs Information Service
- Comprehensive Dissertation Index
- Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications

Current Contents: Social and Behavioral Sciences is a publication that comes out weekly giving the contents of recent journals in the field of education. Although it is not indexed and is not annotated, it does give the researcher a quick overview of recent journal articles in the field. This was reviewed weekly for this project.

The Columbia University Dictionary Catalog of the Teachers College Library (36 volumes) published by G.K. Hall & Co. in 1970 (supplement, 1971) was searched for relevant material.

Education: A Bibliography of Bibliographies by Theodore Besterman (1971) and The World of Higher Education: An Annotated Guide to the Major Literature by Paul Dressel and Sally B. Pratt (1971) were two other books searched. Encyclopedias were searched for relevant material.

It would be helpful if every institution of higher education would provide citations of its own history with summer school. This material may be in the archives of the institution or in a published history.
In order to maintain a current, updated summer sessions bibliography, the following should be done routinely:

1) Current Contents should be searched weekly in an effort to find the latest material that is published.

2) Education Index should be searched monthly for new citations.

3) Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Inc. can be contracted to provide a monthly printout of new material. Under this contract, BRS will automatically search the new citations in the ERIC data base and send the information to the subscriber. At the present time, the cost for this service is $3.00 per month plus 15 cents a page for the printout.

4) If every institution would provide citations of its own history and one or two institutions would agree to keep in touch with current publications, most of the material about summer schools in institutions of higher education would be recorded.

If one institution could release one individual for one day each month in order to search the library reference materials and coordinate these findings with the current information from BRS and put this information together, citations sent in by individuals and/or institutions, it would be possible to keep a current, updated summer sessions bibliography.

The Bibliography of Summer Schools in Institutions of Higher Education has been arranged according to the following categories:

1) History to 1945
   this includes
   a) general history
   b) history of specific schools
   c) history of specific programs

2) Contemporary literature--1945-divided according to
   a) specific programs and program areas
   b) specific institutions (divided according to state)
   c) general materials (statistics, philosophy of summer schools, etc.)

3) Canadian Summer School programs

4) International Summer School programs

Citations within the subject areas are arranged alphabetically.
